The weather in January is always unpredictable and footpaths likely to be muddy so for their walk Peter & Pauline chose "A walk for Wet Days" around Overton. Pauline writes "Luckily on Sunday 20th January the weather was kind to us and we had bright blue skies and clear views during our ramble. Thirteen walkers set off from Overton long stay car park, turning left at the traffic lights and then right past The Greyhound and up Dellands. We followed the footpath to Lower Whitehill Cottages and then turned right along the quiet lanes stopping to admire the views and Abra

Barrow.

Neolithic period to the Late Bronze Age, period 2400-1500 BC.) From here we walked passed Turrell Hill Farm back into Overton where most of us ended our walk with a Sunday lunch at the Greyhound."
